

Empowering South Africa's Youth Through Financial Literacy

1. Executive Summary

Business Name: EduRand

Location: East London, Eastern Cape, South Africa

Mission: To transform how South African students manage their money and improve their financial knowledge through culturally relevant, mobile-first financial education.

Problem: South African students face financial illiteracy crisis with 67% lacking basic money management skills, leading to debt cycles, loan shark exploitation, and long-term financial stress. Existing financial apps don't address the unique socio-economic realities of South African youth.

Solution: EduRand is a comprehensive financial education platform combining mobile app technology, gamified learning, practical tools, and institutional partnerships to deliver contextually relevant financial literacy training to South African students.

Market Validation: South Africa has 26.3 million students across all education levels, with 11.9 million in higher education and TVET. The financial literacy gap affects 78% of young adults aged 18-24, while student debt has increased 400% over the past decade.
